A&R Inside & Out
Legal Director Service

As a business owner or main board director of a company, if your business does not employ an in-house lawyer, how can you get a really good grasp of the legal affairs and needs of your business from the inside out?

You might find the expense of employing an in-house lawyer or legal director prohibitive or it may not yet fit in with your business's plans to take on a lawyer full time. You may also find that using your preferred law firm's specialist solicitors does not match your businesses needs for a generalist strategic-thinking business lawyer. That's what some of our clients have found.

We believe that every business should have an experienced business lawyer on their decision-making team. And that's why we now offer our Legal Director service; a flexible and pragmatic way to manage your business's legal affairs.

What we can do for you

Our Legal Director service provides you with the services of highly experienced in-house lawyers - as and when you need their help.

During the key stages of your business activity or planning, they can work closely with you, at your pace, and can even join your existing management team.

When you need a sounding-board or seasoned legal expert to lean on our in-house lawyers can help. It can sometimes be lonely being the main decision maker in a business. Our in-house lawyers can give you the support you need to make those key legal/business decisions.

Benefits

You benefit from the advice of specialist lawyers who have worked in-house for internationally recognised 'blue chip' companies.

They will bring more than twenty years experience of working in this type of role into the heart of your business.

The use of this service will enable you to get more out of the specialist solicitor expertise that you use and as a result it is likely that you will save money on those traditional solicitor services.

You will gain clear and practical solutions for your ongoing legal needs and will begin to understand your legal affairs so that there are no nasty surprises.

A flexible service that fits around your business needs and budgets, it will free up your valuable time to concentrate on your core commercial activities.

A flexible and pragmatic way to manage your business's legal affairs.

How we work with you

FLEXIBLE IN FORM AND TIME

The service is flexible and can be used in any form that you require, at your place of business or remotely and as and when needed. Try the service first of all. If you like it, and it works for your business, we recommend that you use it on a regular retained basis – your own legal director.

CLEAR & COMMERCIAL

Our in-house lawyers communicate in plain and simple language and propose straightforward solutions aimed at facilitating your business's commercial objectives. They are also very easy to work with.

AN EXTENSION OF YOUR TEAM

Our in-house lawyers will work as part of your internal senior management team. As they have many years' experience of advising businesses from the inside they will adapt quickly to your organisational culture and will get close to your key people straight away.

VALUE & VALUABLE INSIGHT

Our in-house lawyers know when to bring in specialist solicitors, how to prepare a good brief for our network of legal professionals and how to evaluate and use the advice received from them. They will enhance the service you receive from Adams & Remers - and where you use other law firms they will get the best out of those firms too.

KEEPING YOU IN CONTROL

Our Legal Director service will give you peace of mind when it comes to the management and control of your legal affairs. This will help you to run your business more efficiently in the knowledge that your legal affairs are under control.

When you need us

Businesses manage their legal affairs in two phases:

Phase 1 : The INTERNAL Phase

This phase involves the internal organisation and management of a business's legal affairs. It is often neglected by businesses or, when eventually focused upon, takes up the valuable time and resource of their directors. Businesses often ask their specialist solicitors to get involved in this phase which is an inefficient use of resource.

Phase 2 – The EXTERNAL Phase

When a legal issue can no longer be managed internally, businesses need to appoint a specialist solicitor from a law firm. This requires an interface to be set up to provide the law firm with good instructions and to manage the law firm input. This is often put in place with minimal control and little, if any, understanding of what is needed. It also takes up the valuable time and resource of directors.

Our Legal Director service will manage both of these phases for your business to ensure proper management of your legal affairs and to save your directors' valuable time.
